Join the launch of our new Person-Centred Care Standard and Measurement Framework

Our new Person-Centred Care Standard and Measurement Framework are designed to help us consistently deliver, understand and improve person-centred care across all our clinical services. This supports our Quality Everyone Everywhere strategy by helping teams embed quality improvement into everyday practice.

The Standard has been co-designed with staff, patients, families and carers and brings together what matters most to people when they receive our care and support. The Measurement Framework provides a practical tool that teams can use to benchmark current practice and guide quality improvement.

Hear from Professor Angela Wallace, Director of Nursing on the Person-Centred Care Standard and Measurement Framework:

The Standard and Measurement Framework are designed to build on the high-quality, person-centred care that you deliver every day. Creating this consistent approach enables us to recognise what works well and identify opportunities for further improvement across the whole system.

At our launch webinar, you will:

- Learn about the development of the Standard and Measurement Framework
- Explore the 12 domains of person-centred care
- Understand how the Standard supports our Quality Everyone Everywhere strategy
- Hear how teams can begin using the framework in practice
- Find out about future resources, support and engagement opportunities

Whether you work in clinical services, support services, management, improvement, administration or leadership roles, person-centred care is everyone's business. All colleagues are welcome to join us.

Date: Tuesday 24 November
Time: 12.15pm – 1.15pm
Register here

Together, we can create a more consistent approach to understanding, measuring and improving our services.

Blood shortage Amber Alert: update for staff

Scotland remains under an Amber Alert for Group O red cells. Staff are asked to follow the latest guidance to conserve blood, reduce avoidable transfusions and prevent wastage.

Emergency and urgent surgery should continue, and the restriction on elective surgery has been lifted.

16 Days of Activism: meet the Cut It Out and Equally Safe at Work teams

From 25 November to 10 December, NHSGGC will mark the 16 Days of Activism against Gender-Based Violence with information stalls at six sites.

This year's Scottish theme is All Together to prevent and end violence against women and girls. It is a reminder that lasting change depends on people, services and organisations working together.

Staff can drop in between 12.00noon and 2.00pm to meet colleagues from the Cut It Out and Equally Safe at Work programme, ask questions and find out about learning, advice, reporting and support. Information and goody bags will be available while stocks last.

The first event is at Stobhill Hospital on Wednesday 25 November, followed by visits to Hillington Central Laundry, Glasgow Royal Infirmary, Queen Elizabeth University Hospital, Royal Alexandra Hospital and Cowlairs Decontamination Unit.

Care Home Winter Readiness Pack – 2026/27

To support Care Homes over the Winter period the Care Home Collaborative have updated their Winter Readiness Pack for 2026/27.

The pack is full of practical tools and advice to help keep residents well this season.

Nominations for the Jane Davies Award for Person-Centred Practice – closing 29 November

The nomination submission date has been extended for the Jane Davies Award for Person-Centred Practice 2026, with a new deadline of 29 November 2026.

The award is presented through 'What matters to you?', part of HIS' Community Engagement and Transformational Change directorate. Jane, who worked in Community Engagement, was a founding member of the What matters to you? network in Scotland. She passed away on 29 August 2022, and the award is given each year in her memory.

Nominations will be assessed against the criteria outlined in the nomination form and may be submitted for either a person or a team. The award aims to showcase and share examples of excellent practice that place people, their experiences, and what matters to them at the centre of care and support.

We would be grateful if you could share this opportunity throughout your service or department to encourage nominations of colleagues and teams whose work exemplifies person-centred practice.

Following the final scoring and shortlisting, one person and one team will be selected to receive the award. For further information and details of previous recipients, please visit this webpage.
