New Director of Digital Services

Following a competitive recruitment process, Denise Brown, Interim Director of eHealth has been appointed as Director of Digital Services.

Denise joined NHS Greater Glasgow and Clyde in March 2017, initially establishing the Board's Patient Administration Transformation Programme. Following this, she moved to the Head of eHealth Strategy and Programmes role and, since January 2022, has been fulfilling the Director of eHealth role on an interim basis.

Denise has held a number of senior posts since joining the NHS in 2002. Prior to joining NHS Greater Glasgow and Clyde, Denise worked as an Assistant Director, Head of eHealth in NHS Ayrshire & Arran, a post she held for 10 years. Before joining the NHS, Denise held a number of senior positions in the IT industry.

Welcoming the appointment, Jane Grant, Chief Executive, said: "I am delighted that Denise has been appointed to this important role within our senior leadership team. With several years' experience in a senior IT leadership role, including most recently as interim eHealth Director, she is ideally placed to lead the eHealth team and deliver the Board's new Digital Strategy to support transformation and innovation."
